Historical Sketch

The American Baptist Theological Seminary, an institution of learning for the training of black ministers and religious workers, was established in 1924. The seminary is jointly owned and controlled by the National Baptist Convention, Inc. and the Southern Baptist Convention. It is located in Nashville, Tennessee.

In 1913, E. Y. Mullins offered a resolution at the Southern Baptist Convention calling for the establishment of a Negro Theological Seminary. A nine-member committee was appointed to study the issue. The committee recommended the establishment of a seminary that would operate under the control of the National Baptist Convention.

Because of conditions resulting from World War I and a division in the National Baptist Convention, the founding and opening of the seminary was delayed until 1924. The seminary was first located on land adjacent to Roger Williams University in Nashville, Tennessee. The seminary opened Oct. 1, 1924, with an enrollment of 28 men and 2 women. The first faculty consisted of William T. Amiger, J.H. Garnett, and O. L. Hailey. Sutton E. Griggs was elected the first president.

As approved by the Southern Baptist Convention, the objective of the Commission was to “act as liaison between the National Baptist Convention of the U.S.A., Inc. and the Southern Baptist Convention in matters relating to the American Baptist Theological Seminary and through the Seminary to assist generally in developing a strong program of ministerial education for National Baptists.” The members of the Commission were to serve as trustees for the seminary. The executive director-treasurer of the Education Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention was asked to serve as secretary-treasurer of the Commission of the American Baptist Seminary in 1962.

The funds allocated by the Southern Baptist Convention provided operating funds for the seminary and scholarships for students in church related vocations. During the school year, 1987 – 1988, the student body included 165 students. The institution's extension program had an enrollment of nearly 600 students. In the 1990s, the Southern Baptist Convention relinquished any ownership and authority over the American Baptist Seminary, and the Commission was dissolved by Convention action in 1996.
