Historical Sketch

In 1949, Dr. Porter Routh, Executive Secretary of the Southern Baptist Convention, conducted a study of Southern Baptist preaching as reflected in the Convention Sermons. The collection, from 1846 to the present, contains sermon manuscripts and scattered biographical data that he acquired for the study. Several photographs of convention sermon preachers were removed and filed in the Archives Photograph Collection. In addition to Dr. Routh's material, the collection contains information on convention sermons and proceedings from various newspaper accounts beginning in 1845. Some files are more complete than others. With the exception of 1882, 1884, and 1889, manuscripts of the early sermons are not available.

Scope and Content Note

When the Baptists in the South split from those in the North to form their own convention in 1845, the issue was slave ownership, but the purpose was missions. From the beginning, according to records of the proceedings, the Annual or Convention Sermon was an important part of the meeting. It was preached on the first night by a preacher or an alternate appointed the previous year, and its emphasis was foreign missions. (A home, or domestic mission, sermon was preached the second night.)

The organizational proceedings in 1845 record that "brethren T .W. Snyder, W. Curtis, and I. T. Hinson were appointed by a committee to nominate a Brother and an alternate to preach the Annual Sermon at the meeting the next year. After consultation, they proposed Bro. B. Manley as the preacher and Bro. R. Fuller as the alternate, and the brethren were appointed to perform the service." Proceedings in 1846 record that Bro. R. Fuller delivered the sermon "according to appointment" and "to a large and attentive audience."

In 1849, there were two Convention Sermons. The Convention met at the appointed time in Nashville, but attendance was so small, due to a cholera epidemic, that it adjourned and reconvened later in the month in Charleston, SC. Neither the appointed preacher (Rev. W. B. Johnson) nor the alternate (Rev. B. Manley) were present in Nashville, so Rev. J. S. Baker was selected and preached the first evening. When they reconvened in Charleston, Rev. Johnson delivered his Convention Sermon on Foreign Mission Enterprise.

During the Civil War and Reconstruction years (1860s and 1870s), the emphasis of the Convention Sermons shifted from foreign missions to the spiritual needs of the day. In 1868, for example, the topic of the sermon by T. E. Skinner was “Forgiveness and Brotherly Love.”

The collection is arranged chronologically and contains 2 linear feet of material. The first folder contains some of Dr. Routh’s correspondence related to his study. Of special interest is a copy of the Religious Freedom Declaration in 1866.
