Historical Note

The Baptist Faith and Message Fellowship organized in 1973 as a conservative voice concerned about liberalism within the Southern Baptist Convention. The Fellowship through the leadership of Bill Powell and the pages of the Southern Baptist Journal, took an aggressive path from the first publication. Powell attacked “liberal” professors and through letter and print, challenged leaders to affirm the Fellowship’s conservative positions. The Southern Baptist Journal, a monthly tabloid, became the voice for the organization and continued a forceful assault on college and seminary professors and convention leaders. The Fellowship played a significant role in the controversy that erupted in the Southern Baptist Convention in 1979. The Fellowship continued through the late 1980’s and ceased to exist when conservatives gained lasting control of the Southern Baptist Convention. William (Bill) Powell and M.O. Owens served as significant leaders in the organization.
