Dear Fon:

At long last I am going to start on the project of filling in some gaps on identification and interpretation of the set of slides which you sent to me (a long time ago!) from materials which you collected at the Palestine Archaeological Museum. I trust that I can give you some real aid in the project. Forgive me for being so tardy, but I have just had too many irons in the fire. I honestly believe that if I had the time I could get several things done!

744. El-Wad is a site on the Mt. Carmel range in Israel, excavated by Dorothy Garrod(See D.A.E. Garrod and D.M.A. Bate: The Stone Age of Mount Carmel, Vol. I. London: Oxford Univ. Press, 1937). It is valuable for purposes of studying the correspondence between the faunal sequence and the climatic changes in the country in the paleolithic and mesolithic periods. The site is important because it is a type-site of Natufian microlithic culture in which Upper-paleolithic tools are still present. A widespread cultural trait links most of the Mesolithic assemblages found throughout Europe, central Asia, and North Africa. This is typified by schematic designs incised and painted in geometric and abstract patterns, and by highly schematic figures of animals and human beings carved and painted on bones, pebbles, antlers, and the walls of caves. But the Natufians provide an exception to this trend and their art is very different from that of the other Mesolithic cultures. In place of the usual schematic designs, they created a unique naturalistic plastic art, consisting mainly of small sculptures of animals and human figures. Most of their sculpture decorates tools, often sickle hafts, and it is likely that there was some relation between the carved figures and the work done with the tools on which this decoration appears. Some scholars think that the decoration of such utilitarian tools had magical purposes intended to increase the effectiveness of the tool and to ensure an abundant harvest. The sickle-haft in question in this slide is one of two objects of outstanding importance found at el-Wad by Garrod. This one is a carving of a young deer on the handle of a bone sickle-haft. The deer was fashioned by using the natural protuberances of the bone articulation, a particular trait of Natufian art. Its head is raised, perhaps suggesting the posture of nursing. Details such as the large eyes, ears, mouth, and legs are carved with a very high sense of harmony and with fine observation. The legs are decorated with two groups of four parallel lines each, engraved with a flint. There is also a series of parallel notches along the breast. This carving was highly polished, probably by means of sand and leather, and its surface has a high glaze on which no signs of tooling can be seen. The artistic complex of the Natufians of Palestine indicates a great difference in the psychological background of its makers from that of other Mesolithic groups. Whereas the Mesolithic in most regions was marked by a period of abandoning the old values and of searching at random for new ones, in Palestine a true artistic renaissance was born, accompanied by a new rhythm of life and a gradual evolution toward new economic horizons. The art of the Natufians is one of their important characteristics, and it reveals a cultural vitality, a sense of harmony, and an ideology which seem to spring from values partially inherited from the Upper Paleolithic, but which reveal a vigor with no parallels in other Mesolithic cultures. As soon as the Natufian art appeared (as now known from limited-to-be-sure excavations), it exhibited outstanding artistic skill, and this certainly demonstrates the persistence of evolved artistic traditions already old at the time....which is rather remarkable when one considers the dates for the Mesolithic period! So far we are not able to trace the origins of Natufian art, but it is a safe guess that it inherited traditions from Upper Paleolithic times and that its prototypes were made of wood and other perishable materials and thus they have not been preserved. In the Near East, the flourishing of this Natufian naturalistic art seems to form a bridge between the art of the hunters and that of the farmers who came next in cultural evolution.

745. Hedera is a site in Israel in the Plain of Sharon, just south of Mt. Carmel. This chalcolithic site yielded ossuaries such as the one in this slide. These ossuaries are chests for the bones of the dead. In later cultural periods(intertestamental times and later) these ossuaries were made of limestone. In this period, though, they were made of clay and in the form of a house. It is believed that this indicates their conviction that the dead live on and that this is the dead man's house. Similar structures of stone(perhaps also from Chalcolithic period) are found in dolmens throughout the area of Palestine. It may be that the dead were buried in the dolmens until the flesh decayed. Then the bones were placed in the clay ossuaries. Since these clay ossuaries appear in Palestine at about the same time that writing was invented in Mesopotamia(ca. 3500 B.C.) we do not have any literary materials to clarify the usage of the ossuaries. It has been suggested that the practice ofburying in these clay "houses" was unusual and perhaps reserved for great kings or heroes, the preservation of whose houses and thus after-life dwellings with their bones was thought to have some special virtue. Another item of value is that these ossuaries, since they are in the form of houses, probably reflects a typical house of the period. It evidently had a door at one end and three windows in the other. The walls were decorated on the outside with red paint, with horizontal bands and rows of alternating vertical lines and triangles. The roof was gabled and slightly curved, probably made of reeds covered with mud. (See Journal of the Palestine Oriental Society, Volume XVII).

746. Jericho(O.T. site) in the Jordan Valley of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan(Arab). This ivory bull's head was found in the second campaign of excavations at Tell es-Sultan(O.T. Jericho) by Garstang in 1931. Garstang was not certain nor clear in what its original use was, though he suggested that it must have formed an attachment of some kind. His reports also raise questions as to whether it dates from Middle Bronze Age 1 (Miss Kenyon's EB-MB) or, as Ray Clevaland of Johns Hopkins su ggests as a possibility the first half of the 9th century B.C. which would be Iron Age. So far, no definite conclusions can be reached as to date or original use. However, Cleveland has made an excellent brief study of comparing it with other similar examples found all over the Near East. This is published in the Bulletin of the American Schools of Oriental Research, No. 163 for October 1961, pp. 30-36. We have similar materials from Egypt and Mesopotamia.

747. The information which I have indicates that these materials came from Ai (et-Tell) and not from Ain-Shems(Bethshan).

748. Jericho. I understand that this vase was found when John Garstang was digging here in the early 1930s. It was dubbed (by Garstang's cohorts) "Jericho John."

749. Ain Shems(Beth shemesh) of the O.T.) West side of the Jordan river.

750. Tell el-Ajjul(Beth Eglaim of the O.T.) in the Philistine Plain, south of Gaza and right on the coast. It was the Hyksos who introduced the use of the Horse and chariot into Egypt and Palestine-Syria.

751. A typical piece of Middle Bronze Age pottery with its beautiful painted lines.

752. Bethshan (Tell el-Husn). The Hittite capitol in the Middle Bronze Age was Boghaz-koi in north-central Asia Minor.

753. Hathor was an Egyptian goddess whose influence was felt throughout Palestine -Syria. It is especially reflected in clay plaques and figurines, with her distinctive headdress. On this slide, her headdress reflects her symbols of horns of the sacred cow with the sun's disk between the horns.

754. Tell ed-Duweir (biblical Lachish). Here the famous Lachish Letters were found, dating to the 6th century B.C. The city is located on the edge of the Philistine Plain.

755. Also from Lachish: a goblet decorated with double stemmed ivy leaf pattern. An importation from the beginning of the Late Bronze Age (time just before Hebrews came into Canaan from the southeast). Much pottery was brought in during the Late Bronze Age from Cyprus through Phoenicia, through Philistia, and other places. Pottery from Mycenae and other Greek centers was imported also.

756. Megiddo (Tell el-Mutesellim) guarding the pass from the Philistine and Sharon Plains into the Plain of Esdraelon or Jezreel. Ivory was used extensively in royal palaces here, at Samaria, Arslan Tash and other places. In addition to such boxes it was used for inlay work.

757. Ivory carving from "Ivory palace" of Ahab at Samaria.

758. Ivory carving showing Egyptian influence on their art.

759....764. Provenance unknown to me.

765. Beth-eglaim again, on coast below Gaza.

766. Same location.

767. Southern Palestine...probably influenced by Egyptian art.

768. In addition to the jar and bowl, there is also in the picture a lamp which is typical of the period.

769. Materials which shed light on the nature of the Essene city life and activities, as well as the quality of materials used.

770. Every book of the Old Testament was represented in fragments found, except the book of Esther. All books of the Apocrypha were found also.

771. Rules and regulations governing entrance into the community and the conduct of members were found inscribed on some of the scrolls. The Essenes are not mentioned in the N. T., though they are one of several sects mentioned as being parts of Judaism.

772. Wadi Murabba'at is located southeast of Bethlehem in the hills south of Qumran.

773. Rules governing life in the Essene Community at Qumran.

774. Fragments were found written in Hebrew, Greek and Aramaic(the language spoken by the Jews upon their return from Exile in Babylon in the 6th century, B.C.

775. Ostracon is a broken piece of pottery with writing on it. If there is no writing it is called a sherd or a potsherd.

777.
778. Reminds one of the fellow in the NT who buried his in a field.
779. The Scrollery has now been dismantled, all the materials having been photographed and reconstructed for scholars to publish.

780. It is though by some that the writers sat on the highest part and used the lower for a foot-rest, writing on tablets on their laps.

781. Same.
782. Cave 4 is just southwest of the excavated section of Qumran.
783. Same. The waterfall which furnished water to the community via a viaduct is in the background.
784. From Cave 11 many valuable scrolls have come, some as well preserved as the Isaiah manuscript from Cave 1.

785. The crack produced by the earthquake is along the right side of the steps in the picture, not visible in this shot.

786. John Allegro of Manchester Univ. (England) has been digging in various places mentioned in these scrolls trying to find the supposed treasure mentioned. Other scholars do not think there is any such treasure.

787. Many of the scrolls found in the caves may have been written with ink from these inkstands.

790. It is unusual to find whole pieces of pottery except in tombs.
791. General view of excavated portion of the Qumran community.
792. Close-up of rooms in Qumran community. Walls and floors were plastered
793. A part of the famous Madeba map. It was part of floor of a church.
794.
795.
796. Ras el-'Ain(Aphek; also known as Pegae and Antipatris). It is located at the source of the Yarkon river in Israel.

797. Balata is biblical Shechem which has just been excavated for the past few years by G. Ernest Wright of Harvard and B.W. Anderson of Drew Seminary.

798. Beth-eglaim again. Use of birds in metopes is typical of
799. Same. Philistine pottery.
800. Old Testament Jericho. Tell es-Sultan.

801. Probably Philistine pottery or influenced by it.

802. Ain Shems is Bethshemesh. Being close to Philistine plain and Joppa, this piece may have been imported, or it may be a copy of imported ware; probably the latter.

803.

804. Bethshan is Tell Husn(arabic name), and Scythopolis of NT. period. Egyptians were in control here for many years.

Well, Fon, this is not much but I hope it will help some. The first number or two will show you what we could do if we just had time.!!

Many thanks for the slides and let me know if I can help you further.

Fraternally,

Marc

ART: THE LIFE OF JESUS OF NAZARETH, paintings by William Hole (booklet)

7724 Luke 1: 39-56 Mary goeth into the hill country of Judea and saluteth Elizabeth. The difference of costume worn by women of Northern and Southern Palestine is distinctly marked; the Virgin wears the holiday dress of a Nazarene; Elizabeth that of a woman of Bethlehem and its neighborhood.

7725 Luke 2: 4-7 Joseph and Mary arrive at Bethlehem; but find there is no room for them in the inn.

7726 Luke 2: 15,16 Thereupon the shepherds proceed to Bethlehem and find the Babe lying in a manger.

7727 Matt. 2: 1,2 Having seen His star in the east, three wise men journey to Jerusalem; and enquire for him who is born king of the Jews.

7728 Matt. 2; 9-11 The wise men find Jesus in Bethlehem and worship the Child, presenting Him with kingly gifts. Midieval tradition, based on a literal acceptance of Isa. 9: 1-3, is responsible for the otherwise unsupported supposition that the "wise men" of the Gospel were kings.

7729 Matt. 2: 13-15, 19-23 Warned by God in a dream, Joseph taketh Him with His mother into Egypt; whence they return to Nazareth on the death of Herod.

7730 Luke 2: 40 Mary and Child Jesus in Nazareth. And there his childhood is spent, the grace of God being with him. "Ain Miryam" or Mary's Well, seen in this picture, is one of the sites of whose authenticity there can be no reasonable doubt. It is the only public fountain in Nazareth, and thither must the Virgin Mother and her child have proceeded daily to draw water for the household.

ART: THE LIFE OF JESUS OF NAZARETH, paintings by William Hole (booklet)

7731 Luke 2: 41-50 Jesus goeth up with his parents to the passover at the age of twelve years; and tarrieth behind in the temple, seeking instruction from the doctors of the law.

7732 Luke 2: 51,52 Jesus returneth with his parents to Nazareth where he is subject unto them. He worked with Joseph as a carpenter in Nazareth, making the simple articles which comprised the furniture of an Eastern home at that time, and primitive wooden ploughs, such as those still in use in parts of Palestine.

7734 Mark 1: 13 And He was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan. Imagination fails to picture a scene of more terrible desolation and utter solitude than is presented by the ravine which age-long tradition indicates as the spot which witnessed that forty-days conflict between Good and Evil.

7735 John 1: 35-42 Jesus then returneth to Jordan, where Johnand Andrew follow Him, the latter bringing also his brother Simon. Jesus' lodging on the banks of the Jordan, at which place His earliest disciples were attracted by His words and teachings, was probably one of those black goat-hair tents in common use among the wandering inhabitants of the Ghor, or lower Jordan Valley.

7736 Luke 6: 12-23 Jesus goeth up into a mountain apart, whither He is followed by the multitude and His disciples. From these He selected twelve to be His disciples. A visit to the Horns of Hattin, known as the Mount of Beatitudes, pictured here, is convincing, if not of the accuracy of the traditional Mount, at least of the singular suitability of the place for the purpose it is said to have fulfilled. The Sea of Galilee is clearly seen in the distance with Capernaum on the shore.

7737 John 1: 43-45 With these and two other disciples, Philip and Nathaniel, Jesus journeyeth into Galilee. The scene depicted is familiar to pilgrims, being a beautiful valley through which runs the road from Jerusalem to Shechem and Galilee

7738 John 2: 1-11 Where He is present at a marriage feast in Cana, and performeth His first miracle. "And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there: And both Jesus was called and His disciples, to the marriage."

7739 John 2: 13-17 Jesus Goeth up to Jerusalem and cleanseth the temple from defilement.

7740 John 3: 1-5 Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, cometh to Jesus by night to be further informed concerning His doctrine.

7741 John 5: 2-9 Jesus findeth an infirm man at the pool of Bethesda to be healed by the troubling of the water; He biddeth him rise and walk.

7742 Mark 5: 22-34 On the way to the house of Jairus, whose little daughter lieth sick, He healeth a woman in the crowd, and commendeth her faith.

7743 Luke 7: 36-50 At the house of Simon the Pharisee, He rejecteth not the love and service of a sinful woman, but rather forgiveth her.

7744 Matt. 16-13-20 When Jesus came into the coasts of Caesarea Philippi, He asked His disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?

ART: THE LIFE OF JESUS OF NAZARETH, paintings by William Hole

7745 Mark 1: 21,22, 32-34 The Sabbath being ended, the people of Capernaum bring unto him many afflicted with divers diseases, and He healeth them.

7746 Mark 4: 1-9 Because of the pressure of the multitude, Jesus seateth himself in Peter's fishing boat, and teacheth the people many things by parables.

7747 Luke 5: 4-7 The preaching ended, Jesus commandeth Simon Peter to let down his net in deep water, which being done, a great multitude of fishes is enclosed.

7748 Mark 6: 31-44 Jesus seeing the multitude, is moved with compassion and and miraculously feedeth them.

7749 Mark 6: 45-52 Jesus walking upon the sea, overtaketh His disciples.

7750 Luke 8: 22-25 Crossing the Sea of Galilee with His disciples, Jesus stills a tempest. Such a tempest as is here describe is no unusual occurrence on the Sea of Galilee. Sudden violent storms sweep down upon the lake, mainly from the "Valley of Doves" west of the Plain of Gennesareth.

7751 Luke 17-11-19 Jesus, having cleansed ten lepers, is grieved that but one returneth to give thanks, and he a stranger.

7752 Mark 10-13-16 He blesseth little children and chideth those who would keep them from Him. The architectural setting of this picture is adapted from a small square inside the Damascus Gate

7753 Matt 21: 1-11 Jesus, riding on the foal of an ass, entereth Jerusalem, the multitudes shouting 7754 Luke 19: 47,48; 20: 1-8 Jesus thereafter teacheth daily in the temple, the priests demand of Him by what authority He doeth these things. This scene is supposed to have taken place in one of the great outer courts of the Temple.

7755 Luke 21: 37 And in the day time He was teaching in the temple; and at night He went out, and abode in the mount that is called the Mount of Olives. As we ascend towards sunset the slopes of Olivet and pause to gaze on the scene beneath, the panorama of the city presented to view is in its leading features, essentially similar to that upon which the eyes of Jesus rested when crossing the Kedron and ascending the slope of Olivet.

7756 John 13:1-10 Jesus, with the twelve, partaketh of the passover feast in an upper chamber. He teacheth humility by washing the disciple's feet.

7757 John 13: 21-30; Mark 14: 22-26
Thereafter He breaketh bread, and giveth them the cup, commanding them to do this in remembrance of Him.

7758 Matt. 26-36-46 Jesus then proceedeth to Gethsemane with His disciples, where, going apart from them, He prayeth in agony of spirit. As the word "Gethsemane" means "the oil press," the "Garden" was in all probability an olive yard, whose actual site must have been in the immediate vicinity of the spot which age-long tradition indicates as the scene of the agony.

9116		Ascent route, rocks are about 2 feet high, each
9117		Southern Sinai from the summit
9118		Mt. Serbal from the southeast
9119

1. Mt. Serbal: near Feiran and Rephidim and west from Ras-Safsafa, the mountain is a chain rather than a peak (altitude 6759 feet--2052 metres). There is no nearby plain such as the one described in Exodus 19: 2.

2. Mt. Sinai, Horeb, Ras-Safsafa, Jebel Musa:
   Ras-Safsafa rises above the plain ar Raha and is the most widely accepted choice of scholars as the site of the Revelation of the Decalogue to Moses.

   Jebel Musa is a mile-long chain behind Ras-Safsafa; the peak is called Moses Peak, also Jebel Musa. Moses Peak is 7519 feet-2285 meters in altitude)

3. Mt. Catherine is the highest point in Mt. Sinai area, 8551'-2637 metres.

4. St. Catherine's Monastery is at the side of Mt. Safsafa, with Jebel Musa in the background.

IMPRESSIONS FROM VISITS TO

EPHESES, PERGAMUM, SARDIS, AND SMYRNA

(May 12 to 14, 1972)

This visit to the cities that once were so powerful, wealthy, and cultured has been very impressive. First of all, this is a beautiful region. The mountains, valleys, and plains are tremendously impressive. Some of the mountains start right at the sea coast and rise abruptly and sharply to tremendous heights. Many of the mountains remind me of those in New Mexico--the greener ones, and some remind me of the Blue Ridge Mountains only these are much higher and more gigantic. There are sections where wind erosion has been similar to that in parts of Utah and Arizona. The valleys are wide and beautiful and at this time of the year, very productive. Wheat and many other crops carpet the earth beautifully. The wheat is far advanced and will soon be ready for harvesting. Olive trees and many kinds of fruit trees grow along the mountains and up their slopes. The mountains are covered with grass and shrubs, but also with pines and especially with pinon.

The city of Izmir is built on the site of ancient Smyrna. Some of the ruins of Smyrna are still to be visited, others have not yet been excavated. The modern city is built over the ruins of centuries. The Agora is not as impressive here as in many other places because much of it has been built upon by succeeding generations and civilizations. Some of the more famous ancient statues are preserved.

Higher up on the citadel is a fortress that is the remains of a fortress built by Alexander. The walls rise many feet into the air and are from four to six feet wide. Under the surface are colonnade arches that must have been a part of the palace or headquarters building for Alexander and his succeeding generals. Then came the Roman period when the fortress was preserved for the protection of the city.

In the days of John and Polycarp (who was martyred here), it was a city of 250,000 people and is only 500,000 now; although, with the suburbs it might be more. In those days it was called "the Glory of Asia." Today it is called "the Pearl of the Aegean." It hugs the coastline around an immense horseshoe-shaped bay that is exceedingly beautiful. The water is a deep blue. It is a very strategic center today--the third largest and third most important city of Turkey. This whole vast region seems to be covered with mountains and beautiful, fertile valleys. They are also some interesting and strange phenomena of the working of nature. Many of these I was unable to see, but have read about them and have seen pictures.

Ephesus is about forty-five to fifty miles to the south of Izmir and there is a small town called Selcuk. In this town, upon the highest hill of the little city, is the basilica called St. John Basilica. It is only ruins today, but it was an enormous building. It dates back to the very early centuries after Christ. It is thought that John was pastor of the church of Ephesus and this was built in his memory years after his exile and death. Not far from this basilica are the ruins of the temple of Diana. It must have been an enormous building, but not much is left. This was the third temple as others were destroyed by earthquakes or time. About a mile on farther west, one finds the principal ruins of the city of Ephesus. There was the gymnasium, the enormous stadium, the colonnaded streets, paved with marble or granite, with high marble columns along each side, crowned with immense capitals. How the ancients were able to raise those capitals to the top of those columns 40 or 50 feet above the level of the street is still unknown.

Then one passes the huge amphitheater and comes to the Agora which was the cultural, economic, industrial, and perhaps religious center. There are the stalls for the stores of that day, and in that area which was the market place and gathering place for all kinds of discussions and debate, it is probable that Paul preached. It was there, no doubt, that the riot against Paul and his companions was incited. Then one passes a library and another section of the city that was in the very heart of town rather than off to the side or in the suburbs as is common today.

Up the marble-paved street in front of important and sometimes sacred wells, or fountains, are houses that rose as much as five stories, the temples Trajan, temples to other emperors, schools, baths, gymnasiums, small theaters, the city hall, and many other monuments and important buildings erected in those days.

As one walks and walks through these ruins, he can see from the ancient walls of the city high up on the mountain how enormous the city must have been. It is hard to realize that a city in those days with its tiny houses covered as much area as that enclosed by the walls. It is very possible that the wealth of the city described in Revelation 18:11-13 referred to the luxury and commerce John had seen in the city of Ephesus. (Of course, it could have referred to Smyrna as well or it may have reference to the city of Rome or it could refer to all of these). Anyway, the wealth described in that chapter and in those verses could very well be applicable to the city of Ephesus.

Pergamum is 65 miles to the north of Smyrna (or Izmir) and one drives through beautiful mountains and valleys along the coast by bays and inlets of the sea and then turns inland to climb a mountainous road to the city of Pergamum. There is a small city, Bergama, which is very beautiful as one looks down upon it from the height of the mountain on which the Acropolis was built. Here was a huge fortress with the palaces of the kings of different ages and the temples to Diana, Trajan, Dionysus, Zeus, etc., and one of the largest of the ancient amphitheaters. This one is not circular as others, but it is much higher and steeper. It seems to have been outside the walls of the Acropolis, but there were probably other walls around the city.

One sees, also, the ruins of an ancient aquaduct. How water was ever brought up that aquaduct to the Acropolis, I will never understand since they had no pumps. The gigantic mountains are covered with pine and pinon, with narrow valleys to one side and extensive broad valleys, very beautiful in the springtime, to the other. Below this crown of the mountain, which is very high and steep, by the way, are the ruins of other sections of the city. Across a small valley one comes to the Asklepion. Here was one of the religious centers. There were also many dwellings and houses of commerce here. Circular temples were built around an earth-filled hub. Around that enormous central portion are the halls where worship was conducted, apparently. There are sacred tunnels, one of them 80 meters long, which one can walk through today, that likned the Agora with their most sacred temple.

A small amphitheater is here and a small library that had a beautiful mosaic floor, some of which can be seen in the archeological museum at Bergama. (I forgot to mention that up on top of the mountain was the large library with 200,000 volumes.) It was in Pergamum that parchment was first devised as a writing material. This, of course, was a tremendously important discovery. Parchment was much better and more lasting than papyrus which had been used for centuries. Unfortunately, this library was carried to Alexandria, Egypt, given by Cleopatra to Anthony and was destroyed in the 4th century. What a wealth of information and history might have been found if even some of those volumes and scrolls had been saved!

Sardis is about fifty or sixty miles to the east and slightly north of Izmir. One drives through formidable mountains and looks to mountain ranges that rise exceedingly high and are rather foreboding in their appearance. The armies of the Persians, the Syrians, the Greeks, the Romans had to find and follow the valleys in between these mountains and these large cities were either built on important rivers or on the seashore.

Sardis is quite impressive; and one gets the impression of another enormous city. There are many ruins to the left of the highway as one travels east. They are reconstructing a gymnasium and a synagogue. They found the original walls and foundations and are using the original stones and columns of marble as much as possible. I had no idea that the gymnasium was such a huge structure. (The Roman gymnasium was a school, sports arena, and bath house—all in one. The Roman bath houses were the social clubs—and no Roman city would be without several). One passes by ruins of other houses and temples going to the temple of Artemus, or Diana, which is perhaps the most unearthed ruin of Sardis. From there one can look up to the hilltop where the Acropolis stood. This may have been where the fortress existed that was twice taken because the guards were asleep, enabling the Persians, and later the Greeks, to capture the city of Sardis and march on to additional conquests. The church at Sardis was also asleep and dead and no good thing was said about it. Sardis was the capital of Lydia and had done an excellent job in its mission of spreading the Greek language and culture throughout that entire vast region. But the church had failed miserably to comprehend and fulfill its mission, apparently infected by the lethargy that characterized the city.

Farther on about fifty or sixty miles is the city of Philadelphia which I did not get to see. Time and strength ran out.

There are several impressions; one is the magnificence of these ancient cities, built of granite and marble, primarily, with marble facing on most of the houses and marble columns inside the houses as well as along the streets, the amphitheaters and the other buildings--cities of extreme and phenomenal magnificence.

Also, cities immense in size as well as in population.

Moreover, these cities were built to endure. The foundations of the temples were often five and six feet wide. Even the foundations of the houses were eighteen inches to two feet wide of solid rock and the super structure was of rock. This is evident by the fact that as excavations unearthed these ancient buildings, many of them still stand in remarkable condition and preservation after all of these centuries.

The enormous walls built around the city offered protection from enemies. Fortresses were important elements of the cities to protect them from invading enemies.

They were cities of culture, such as Pergamum with its library of 200,000 volumes. All of them prided themselves on their great literary culture and their wealth and luxury.

They were cities of international commerce, of great economic ability, and of course, they were extremely religious.

At the same time, they were cities of corruption. Even their religious life was characterized by vileness as evidenced from many of their images, their sculpture, their pictures and mosaics.

They were cities of enormous power and influence, yet today they are only rock heaps. We admire the magnificence and the genius of construction, but we stumble over their rocks and realize that they offered nothing worthy of preservation.

What went wrong?

I would not attempt a simplistic answer, although this may seem like one, but I think it is basic to all civilization--they worshipped the wrong priorities--they had a false sense of values. They had false gods and therefore the wrong values. Moreover, like Jerusalem, they rejected the visitation of God. For God sent his disciples and apostles to proclaim the gospel of Jesus Christ. Had they listened to the gospel and become the agents of God for the fulfillment of his purpose in history, they would doubtlessly have continued to this day with even greater grandeur and influence. But they were lax and licentious. Their worship was corrupt as is evident by the fact that in Ephesus each year a thousand priestesses devoted themselves to prostitution in the name of Diana whom they worshipped, along with many other gods and goddesses.

Thus, the crumbling of the cities reminds us that these great, wealthy, powerful, cultures and civilizations were not destroyed by invasion so much as by disintegration because of the lack of character, the lack of integrity, the lack of the real meaning and purpose of life, the lack of the right set of values, the lack of God in their character as well as in their worship.

Perhaps the message to the church at Laodicea is most pertinent to us today. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any one hears my voice and opens the door, I will come in to him and eat with him, and he with me" (Rev. 3:20).
